

DEPARTMENT OF OBSTETRICS AND GYNECOLOGY DIVISION OF MATERNAL FETAL MEDICINE

Job Duties:

The responsibilities of the Division encompass the traditional academic triad: Excellence in patient care, medical student, and resident training, as well as pursuit of basic or clinical research. The division serves as the tertiary referral center for 29 counties, providing inpatient and outpatient consultations, prenatal diagnosis (including involvement in a very active fetal echocardiography program), ultrasound guided fetal therapy, and supervision of the high-risk clinic. There is an active maternal cardio-obstetrics program and an evolving rural telehealth program.

The successful candidates will join a very collegial, enthusiastic group of three maternal fetal medicine physicians. Currently, division members take evening/week-end phone call; deliveries would be at the interest and discretion of the candidate.

Job highlights include:

- A division currently composed of 3 physicians, 12 trained perinatal sonographers, 1 genetic counselor and 2 experienced perinatal nurses
- A referral center serving a population of 1.4 million (accounting for approximately 17,000 deliveries across the 29-county service area) with extensive need for maternal and fetal care
- A Level IV NICU
- Supportive and experienced pediatric subspecialists, including pediatric surgery
- An opportunity to develop or expand one's clinical/research niche
- Beautiful eastern North Carolina with proximity to an extensive array of cultural and outdoor activities

Special Instructions to Application:

East Carolina University requires applicants to submit a candidate profile online to be considered for the position (see below). In addition to the online profile, please submit online the required applicant documents:
